Policy for Research

HVPS College of Law truly believes in excellence of the institution, its staff and the students. The teachers, non-teachers and students are empowered to develop their academic sphere by motivating them to go beyond the traditional classroom teaching-learning. Informal learning is as important as formal learning, and hence should be given due consideration. For that purpose, the institution encourages its members to delve into out-of-the-classroom-activities, one of them being Research.

One of the easiest ways to maximize research participation is to urge teachers and students to participate in various co-curricular activities like conferences, paper presentations, etc. One more addition in law colleges is Moot Court. The law students have to do a lot of research regarding the cases they are given. Moot Court is such an integral part of legal education that it is included as a compulsory component in the curriculum as well as a part of National, State, University and College level Law Fests.

Apart from the above activities, the teachers and students are also motivated to write research papers, articles and present them in the college magazine, college journal and other nationally and globally recognized publications.

The following are several ways in which the members of the institution can display their research interest:

1. In case of articles, research papers, etc. the individuals can email them to info@hvpslawcollege.edu.in or hvpslicitmagz@gmail.com . The literary team reviews the contributions and then decides where to best utilise them.
2. In case of conferences, paper presentations, etc., the institution circulates brochures/invitations/notices well in advance for the interested individuals to decide and complete the registration procedure.

HVPS College of Law and its management is also planning to start a research center in the upcoming years wherein its students can pursue PhD. This will widen the institution's academic sphere as well as create a more research-centered environment in the institution.
